

Population Highlights ♦ Fourth Quarter 2010

The population in British Columbia reached 4,554,085 as of January 1st, 2011. Quarterly population growth is at its lowest since 2006, reaching only 1.2% compared to the same quarter last year. Saskatchewan continued to lead growth (+1.5%), leaving BC in shared fifth place with Ontario and just above the average growth across Canada (+1.1%).

Annual growth: 2009 to 2010

The population in BC experienced an increase of 55,295 persons during the 2010 calendar year. Most of this growth is attributable to international migration (38,155 persons), followed by steady natural increase (12,502 persons) and interprovincial migration (4,638).

Interprovincial migration to BC took a significant hit in 2010 as a net of 4,638 persons settled in BC, dropping 55.2% compared to 10,351 in 2009. The largest influx of interprovincial migration was in Alberta, with 6,797 persons, while Ontario suffered another year of net losses (-4,543).

BC hosted a fair share (15.7%) of the 280,671 immigrants that landed in Canada in 2010. However, the majority of immigrants continued to settle in Ontario (42.1%) and Québec (19.2%). The number of non-permanent residents (NPRs) in BC also inched ahead (+0.8%) in 2010, easing since a boom of double-digit growth in 2008 and 2009. It is estimated that BC is home to almost a quarter (22.7%) of the Canadian NPR stock (596,271). Most NPRs reside in Ontario (40.2%).

Fourth quarter, 2010

Net interprovincial migration totalled 442 persons to BC in the fourth quarter of 2010, with the province gaining 11,086 migrants, but losing 10,644. BC received migrants from all provinces and territories during the fourth quarter, except Nunavut. Most in-migrants came from Alberta (+4,996) and Ontario (+3,228). Alberta saw the biggest interprovincial influx (+2,510), while Ontario lost the most interprovincial migrants (-1,811).

Data Source: Statistics Canada

BC's natural increase of 2,517 came from the difference between 10,593 births and 8,076 deaths.

Migration from outside of Canada's borders typically contributes more to the provincial population than movement within Canada itself. However, the fourth quarter of 2010 completely bucked this trend, with a net loss in international migration (-727).

Historically, fourth-quarter net migration has usually been lower than the first three quarters, but never to this extent. The main cause of this decline stems from a loss in net NPRs to BC (-7,353) in the fourth quarter. The primary reason for NPRs to come to Canada is to study and work. However, recent policy changes¹ in terms of study and/or work permit renewals—effective during the last quarter of 2010—may be the reason for this unprecedented drop on NPRs. Additionally, historical trends (a decline starting around 2008) and typical seasonal variation may also be an underlying factor in the drop.

Immigrants from other countries added 8,499 persons, as well as 649 persons who previously emigrated, but have returned to Canada. A total of 2,522 people left BC for other countries abroad.

Citizenship and Immigration Canada recorded a total of 57,507 new landed immigrants (or permanent residents) in the fourth quarter of 2010—an increase of 2.1% compared to 2009 Q4. Of these landed immigrants, 8,148 (14%) chose BC as their immigrant destination—third only to Ontario (41%) and Québec (22%).

BC's fourth quarter share of new landings in Canada has declined over the last two years—down from 18% in 2008 to 14% in 2010. It is possible that this decline may be a result of the rise in landings to Alberta (from 10% in 2008 to 12% in 2010).

China is still the main contributor of immigrants to BC, accounting for 19% of total landings in BC. New permanent residents from the Philippines made up 17%, while 14% came from India.

Immigrants categorized under the Skilled Worker class made up the largest share (35%) of landings in BC during the fourth quarter of 2010, followed by the Family class (31%). While the share of Family class immigrants have remained in the low to mid 30s, Skilled Worker class immigrants have been on the decline over the last decade—a drop of almost 20% since 2000 Q4. However, the fourth quarter share of 2010 Skilled Worker immigrants bounced back, making up 35% of the total.
